Another kind of fishing with nets here with us, the Teop people, is called seige.

(2) A vagana bona saka vaapenapena haana bea peha gea buaku ge bero aba nao tea nao vagana.
This kind of fishing allows one or two or many people to go fishing.

(3)	O kaku vagana bona he na paku vonaen:	This kind of fishing is done as follows:
(4)	Eara na vaahae rara a kave, eara repaa hua vo tea maa hum to vavaasun kave komana raara.	We take the net on board, then we paddle to the places where we put up nets.
(5)	Amaa hum bona he toro hum vai to gunagunaha kaakoo rio iana beve tarahi batana.	These places must be places where the fish go when the tide is ebbing.
(6)	O kaku hum bona he eiei tea maa hoa.	This kind of place is in the passages.
(7)	Beara suguna, eara repaa busu nia kave, eara repaa rahi ge vaasun pina nie bona hanana teo iana.	When we arrive, we throw the net, then we pull it or put it up so that it blocks the way of the fish.
(8)	Eara repaa pam nio buo punete na kave teo buo boon to paa vaasun vuara, eara he tea mei tea vaagunaha a kave.	Then we tie the two ends of the net to two mangrove poles that we have erected before we let down the net.
(9)	Beve kavara, eara repaa vahakaa pina koa maara o iana to mene gunaha kaakoo teo meho hum.	After that we beat the water to prevent the fish from going down to another place.
(10)	Bea tahii taneo bata mana tea tarahi, eove o vuri to kahi taneo hana rio iana.	When the sea eventually starts ebbing, this is the time when the fish start hanging in the net.
(11)	Beori hana rori, eara na antee batara tea no ropusu kahi riori bona kave, ge be hiki, ei mana, beve tarahi vakavara.	When they are hanging there, we can take them out of the net, or if they don't, this eventually means that it is low tide.
(12)	Evehee, eara toro usu bata koa ni rara o iana vai o bebeera to mene buno kurukurus bona kave, a kave repaa taparata.	But we must watch the big fish that they do not move so much that the net gets opened.
(13)	O kaku vagana vai o mataa tabae eara sa hua binubinu haara tea rake ge vatevatete a iana.	It is a good kind of fishing, because we do not paddle around to search for or chase the fish.
(14)	Eara kahi sun ihuana koa nom beori hana rori tea kave.	We would just stand still waiting for them to hang in the net.
(15)	Bea tahii masi vakavara, eara repaa voosu vahaa vaan.	When the sea is at low tide, we go home back to the village.
